PERFUMES IN THE FRENCH RIVIERA: FROM THE FIELD TO THE BOTTLE

JULY 6TH TO JULY 10TH

NICE - FRANCE

Perfumes in the French Riviera: from the field to the bottle!

Nice, located on the French Riviera, is a stunning city known for its Mediterranean charm, beautiful beaches, and vibrant culture. Situated in the southeastern part of France, Nice enjoys a privileged location between the azure waters of the Mediterranean Sea and the rugged hills of the Alpes-Maritimes.

The city is famous for its Promenade des Anglais, a picturesque promenade stretching along the coastline, offering panoramic views of the sea and lined with palm trees. Nice boasts a rich history, evident in its charming Old Town (Vieux Nice). Here, narrow cobblestone streets lead to colorful buildings adorned with traditional shutters, bustling markets, and cozy cafes.

In addition to its natural beauty and cultural attractions, Nice is also a gateway to the stunning French Riviera, with easy access to charming coastal towns such as Cannes, Antibes, and Monaco, and Italy.

Nice has a long and storied history in the perfume industry, earning its reputation as a center for fragrance creation and production. In recent years, there has been a resurgence of interest in artisanal and niche perfumes, with independent perfumers and boutique fragrance houses establishing themselves in the region.

These smaller producers often draw inspiration from the natural beauty and rich history of the French Riviera, creating unique and sought-after fragrances.

PROGRAMME HIGHLIGHTS

THE PERFUME ORGAN

The perfume organ is the instrument of perfume creators.

This piece of furniture, poetically named «perfume organ,» is used by «noses»—the creators in laboratories—to assist in the birth of a fragrance.

It consists of an array of bottles containing various raw materials needed to compose a perfume. The perfumer, known as the «nose,» searches on their «organ» for the notes that harmonize best.

The concept of the perfume organ was born in 1884 from the pen of novelist Joris-Karl Huysmans. In his book À rebours, he describes the adventures of Jean des Esseintes, a true anti-hero who chooses a secluded life dedicated to studies, gardens, and perfume creation over the pleasures of high society.

The author imagines a dedicated piece of furniture for his character's perfume-making, which he names «perfume organ.» The book's success was such that the idea was adopted by perfumers of the time, who commissioned the finest cabinetmakers to design this unique laboratory-furniture.

GRASSE

In the Middle Ages, Grasse was not known for its perfumes but for its leather. The town had numerous tanneries and produced high-quality leather. Nobles enjoyed wearing leather gloves but often complained about their unpleasant smell. At the time, tanners used urine and animal waste, which contained ammonia, as part of the tanning process—resulting in well-made but foul-smelling gloves.

In the 16th century, a glove maker in Grasse had the idea of perfuming the gloves by soaking them in floral baths. Catherine de' Medici, a fan of these scented gloves, turned them into a fashion trend at the French court and among the nobility.

This led to the growth of the perfume industry in Grasse, whose mild, sunny climate was ideal for flower cultivation. The town began growing roses, jasmine, lavender, and tuberose. By the 17th century, the Guild of Glove Makers and Perfumers was officially recognized. However, during the French Revolution, the guild was abolished, and the perfume industry overtook the leather trade in Grasse.

In the 19th century, many perfume houses were founded, and Grasse became surrounded by vast fields of flowers cultivated for their delicate scents. Over the next century, perfumes from Grasse attracted an international clientele, earning the city its nickname: the world's perfume capital.

The Programme

(subject to availability)

D1

MONDAY

AN IMMERSION INTO THE WORLD OF PERFUME

Discover fragrances and the different olfactory families in a masterclass. You will learn to recognize scents, identify top, heart, and base notes, and determine which ones appeal to you the most.

This workshop is led by Michèle DULAC, a professor, lecturer, facilitator, and creator of creative perfume workshops, as well as a perfumer (“nez”) with over 30 years of experience. Using her «Perfume Organ,» Michèle DULAC will guide you in selecting fragrances for your own project.

TUESDAY

FROM CONTENT TO CONTAINER

In the early 20th century, jeweler René Lalique partnered with French perfumer Coty to create an iconic perfume bottle. The result was an unforgettable molded glass bottle, embodying the luxury of haute “joaillerie”.

Perfume packaging, in its entirety, is associated with a brand’s values, materials, and imagery. Choosing one packaging over another means being drawn into a universe—selecting a highly personal product where the olfactory dimension may sometimes take a back seat to the overall story crafted by the brand.

Inspired by a visit to Berlin Packaging, located right next to the ISCOM Nice campus, you will dedicate this day to designing the bottle and packaging for your perfume project.

D3

WEDNESDAY

SHOPPING EXPERIENCE AT THE LARGEST SEASIDE SHOPPING MALL IN EUROPE – CAP 3000

Every marketing project relies on a solid store check. Cap 3000 is the ideal place for this field exercise, gathering luxury boutiques, beauty, and perfume brands.

A guided tour of the Dior boutique and its exclusive Private Collection of perfumes will offer insight into fragrances that combine exquisite materials and distinctive signatures, creating unique olfactory silhouettes.

Back at the ISCOM Nice campus, you will challenge your own project during a workshop.

D4

THURSDAY

A DAY IN GRASSE – THE WORLD CAPITAL OF PERFUME, RECOGNIZED BY UNESCO FOR ITS EXPERTISE

Early in the morning, before the sun alters the aromas, you will explore the fragrant alleys of Domaine de Manon—where Dior sources its «exceptional flowers.» Manon will unveil the secrets of cultivating roses and jasmine, as well as the key to her success.

Domaine de Sainte Blanche will be our setting for lunch. This «Accords & Parfums» venue, designed for contemporary creators, was once the workplace of the renowned perfumer Edmond Roudnitska, one of the greatest noses of the 20th century.

A stroll through the enchanting scents of this magical garden will follow.
A visit to the Perfume Museum is a must to understand the history of perfume from antiquity to the present day and explore the botanical garden's plantations.

Finally, Fragonard will reveal «some» of its perfume-making secrets during a guided tour. Once a simple manufacturer, Fragonard has grown over nine decades into an entire universe, now comprising three factories, six museums, and twenty-four boutiques.
